

COMMERCIAL COLLABORATION | RESEARCH SERVICES

Commercial Research Purchasing, Resale and Client Delivery

Professional firms may commission independent evidence work for their clients when a separate written use licence permits it.

What this resource enables

Buy an individual research service for your client, or use eligible funded credit to simplify recurring assignments. Commercial reuse is agreed openly; professional responsibility stays with the authorised party.

IN THIS GUIDE

- Practical evidence questions for the next business decision
- Source requirements, contradictions and accountable human review
- Named deliverables and professional boundaries
- A clear written way to commission exactly the work you need

Aperture Research Works | Reality Before Reliance

Publication edition 2.0 | 11 October 2026 | Public service guide

info@apertureforensic.com | apertureforensic.com

No buyer, client transaction, outcome or investigation is represented as a case study.

Document purpose and control

Commercial research participation and licensing options. No automatic permission to white-label, resell or reuse source records.

Audience: Private business buyers, business owners and professional firms.

Version: 2.0 | Issued: 11 October 2026 | Publication type: client-facing service and evidence guide.

Owner: Aperture Research Works. Governing language: English. Approval of any paid matter follows a separate written scope and human review.

No client data, invented acquisition, fictional transaction, test outcome or client testimonial is included in this resource.

How to use this guide

Start with the issue affecting your decision. Review the documents and questions below, then request a written assignment limited to the facts that need independent checking. No listed capability is automatically included in every quote.

What you can expect

A human-directed research process: relevant questions, lawful source capture, document matching, competing explanations, an explicit limitations register and human quality review.

Inside this guide

Client decision and service benefits; the questions actually examined; lawful records and source checks; deliverables and questions for your advisers; how to engage in writing; professional limitations and source references.

Before you commission the work

A relevant business or counterparty should be named, a concrete decision should be identified, and lawful source access should be assessed. Any detailed scope is supplied separately in a written proposal.

No obligation to prepay future research

Every eligible service may be commissioned at an individually approved ordinary price. Optional future-credit discounts are never a prerequisite, and buying one review does not obligate you to buy another.

Your practical next step

Write to info@apertureforensic.com with your business or professional question, location and the decision date. A human reviews suitability and explains the next appropriate step.

Three ways to work with Aperture

Commercial arrangements should be straightforward for a legitimate practitioner, without pretending every role is a reseller relationship.

Direct professional purchase

- Commission a clearly defined factual research assignment for your own client matter.
- Provide authority to share permitted information and specify the distribution rights required.
- Aperture performs agreed evidence work and delivers it under the defined confidentiality and reliance terms.

Buyer introduction

- Introduce a buyer only with affirmative permission; the buyer directly selects and contracts their own research scope.
- No hidden referral fee, success fee or access to a broker's client list arises by default.

Licensed onward supply

- Where legally and technically suitable, contract separately for an identified professional firm to incorporate or resell explicitly licensed deliverables.
- Define end customer, approved audience, territory, intellectual property, source rights, attribution, quality approval and complaints responsibilities.
- Fees charged to an end client are set by the independent party subject to applicable rules; no representation of guaranteed resale profit.

What research can a practice legitimately buy?

The strongest value lies in evidence-heavy work with a defined end client decision and bounded professional competence.

Eligible subject examples

- Corporate identity and ownership chronology for an acquisition attorney.
- Seller-claim source mapping for a CPA financial due diligence team, with no assurance opinion.
- Supplier or counterparty factual review for an owner or commercial consultant.
- Market and competitor evidence, with sourced claims and contrary material.
- Technical vendor/document claims where authorised specialist security testing remains outside scope.

How a resale licence protects both firms

A lower purchase price from funded credit does not itself allow the same deliverable to be rebranded or sold.

Licence terms needing explicit agreement

- Named contracting parties and client(s), allowed output types and sublicensing limits.
- Source/data/IP rights, third-party database licence restrictions and confidentiality treatment.
- Responsibility for truthfulness, professional disclaimers, translations and any alteration to the evidence.
- Price and payment terms, ownership of customer relationship, conflict procedures and breach/remedy processes.

- State-specific professional licensing, regulated referral restrictions, independent quality controls and human review.

Transparent funded credit for repeated professional work

The optional deposit tiers reflect discounts on qualifying researched work; they are not a promise of unlimited wholesale sourcing or guaranteed resale.

Financial principles

- USD 5,000 prepaid saving 10%; cash debit 90% of eligible approved standard research fee.
- USD 10,000 prepaid saving 20%; cash debit 80% of eligible approved standard research fee.
- USD 20,000 prepaid saving 30%; cash debit 70% of eligible approved standard research fee.
- USD 30,000 prepaid saving 50%; cash debit 50% of eligible approved standard research fee.
- Primary-contact email authorisation and private fortnightly statements are required for the proposed system.
- Research capacity, lawful project fit and minimum approved contribution margin govern every new order.
- Third-party charges, taxes and excluded tasks are separately quoted; no cross-project cross-subsidy is assumed.

What a commissioned deliverable contains

- Defined professional research output and client-appropriate licence details.
- Traceable evidence and limitation record suitable for controlled downstream use.
- Payment and individual project statement where optional credit is approved.
- Written controls over confidentiality, licence scope, client role and complaints.

Results classify individual material claims as supported, partially supported, contradicted, unverified or outside the agreed scope. Unavailable records and alternative explanations are stated explicitly; a missing record is not proof of wrongdoing.

The buying decision: what you need to send

- Firm identity and legal/professional jurisdiction
- Project objective, end client type and commissioned research question
- Intended resale, reuse or white-label rights disclosed upfront
- Source rights and client information permissions
- Written scope and applicable human approvals

Start with a short written description. Do not email bank records, employee files, confidential contracts or other sensitive documents until secure exchange arrangements and authorisation have been confirmed.

How your work is commissioned

1. Describe the decision, jurisdiction, target and required timing by email.
2. A human checks conflicts, privacy, jurisdiction, research feasibility and the boundaries of the requested service.

- 3. You receive a written proposal stating specific work, deliverables, exclusions, fee, required inputs and timing.
- 4. Only after your written acceptance and applicable payment confirmation does the agreed research begin.
- 5. Evidence is checked, documented, reviewed and delivered; any additional work requires a further approval.

Individual assignments may be purchased at their approved standard price. An optional separately approved advance-funded credit arrangement may apply to eligible work; it is never a requirement for obtaining a standalone service.

Scope boundaries and important limitations

- This is a proposed customer programme subject to approval, and the installed email/database system is not live merely because this PDF can be downloaded.
- No guarantee of availability of all services, permanent unqualified discount or performance of a project that violates compliance/capacity/margin gates.
- Refunds, chargebacks, unclaimed credit, insolvency and consumer-law classification need specific approved contractual treatment; do not make an unsupported blanket refund promise.
- Commercial redistribution rights, third-party professional fees and regulated services are never included automatically.
- Email does not create unrestricted security: sensitive statements require recipient verification and proportionate private delivery safeguards.
- Attorney fee-splitting, regulated referrals, professional duty and client consent require profession-specific clearance.
- No automatic white-label, buyer introductions, exclusive territories or client data access.

Independent evidence: how it is assessed

- Establish source provenance, entity identifiers, document dates and the precise wording of each material claim.
- Retain both supporting and contrary material; distinguish public evidence from seller-provided or client-supplied records.
- Recheck calculations and chronological order; explain missing periods, changed data and inconsistent figures.
- Separate observations from conclusions, uncertainties, technical specialist questions and matters the engagement cannot verify.
- Prepare a human-reviewed, proportionate written output that the client and relevant professionals can use.

Source and professional reference directory

The following links are authoritative public starting points, not sources that establish facts about any particular client or target. Requirements must be checked as of the transaction date.

CFPB: Prepaid account rule (classification reference only) Open primary reference

IRS Publication 538: Accounting methods and advance payments Open primary reference

FTC: Business guidance and truth in advertising Open primary reference

Your practical preparation checklist

- State the specific decision you need to make, not simply the topic you want researched.
- Name the subject business, relevant legal entities, operating locations and any material event dates.
- Identify which claims or source documents are already available and which were supplied by an interested party.
- Explain the timetable, intended recipients, limits of lawful access and whether regulated advice is already being obtained.
- Specify whether you want one bounded project, a specialist handoff, a written multi-stage scope or optional credit information.
- Ask us to identify exclusions, expected deliverables, fees, information requirements and the human review and correction route before acceptance.

This checklist is a starting point, not a requirement to hand over sensitive information in ordinary email. We will arrange an appropriate secure exchange channel for confidential records after initial scoping.

Request a written proposal

Email info@apertureforensic.com. Include the business or matter, your role, the critical decision, relevant US state or other jurisdiction, expected timing, and the specific claim or document you want examined. You do not need to schedule a telephone call. Aperture responds within its actual available capacity and does not guarantee acceptance.

Aperture Research Works | <https://apertureforensic.com/> | Reality Before Reliance.